Introduction

What is Benchmarks® for Executives™?

Benchmarks for Executives provides you feedback on the leadership behaviors critical for effectiveness at the top levels of an organization.

After reviewing your results, we recommend you use the Benchmarks for Executives Development Planning Guide to analyze your results and create your plan for development.

How was Benchmarks for Executives Developed?

Benchmarks for Executives is based on theory and research on senior executive effectiveness. CCL identified the leadership behaviors of executives through comprehensive reviews of the academic literature. These reviews provided a list of critical leadership competencies and successful performance dimensions. CCL researchers then supplemented this content with data collected from top-level executives enrolled in CCL's Leadership at the Peak program. In this research, senior executives were asked to recall and describe specific examples of leadership behavior—either positive or negative—that they had observed at the top levels of their organization. These critical incidents served to identify additional leadership competencies and provided specific behavioral examples of effective executive leadership that the research team used to create survey items.

CCL compiles Benchmarks for Executives data from hundreds of executives and thousands of their raters every year. These data are used to create a select normative sample that contains only top-level executives at large companies.

Section 1: Leadership Competencies - Overview Charts

The next three tables provide you with an overview of your scores. Detailed information describing the tables is located at the bottom of each page.

At the beginning of each feedback report section is a Guide for Interpretation. Here you will find a series of questions to help you think broadly about the meaning of your results.

Guide for Interpretation

- Organizations differ in how important various competencies are for success. When does your view match that of your boss and other raters and when does it not match?
- In what categories did you receive your highest and lowest ratings from others?
- Were there any wide differences between Self and All Raters scores? Pay particular attention to areas in which you rated yourself high and your raters rated you low.
- Where are the scores from the various rater groups similar and where do they diverge? What might be the reasons for this?

The left column of this chart lists the competencies. The center gray column shows the Importance ratings. You and your raters were asked to choose 5 competencies Most Important for Success in your organization. The right column of the chart provides the average scores from All Raters and Self for each of the competencies. All Raters includes Boss, but not Self.

You and your raters used the following response scale to indicate your level of effectiveness:

1 = Deficient

2 = Marginally effective

3 = Effective

4 = Highly Effective

5 = Exceptional

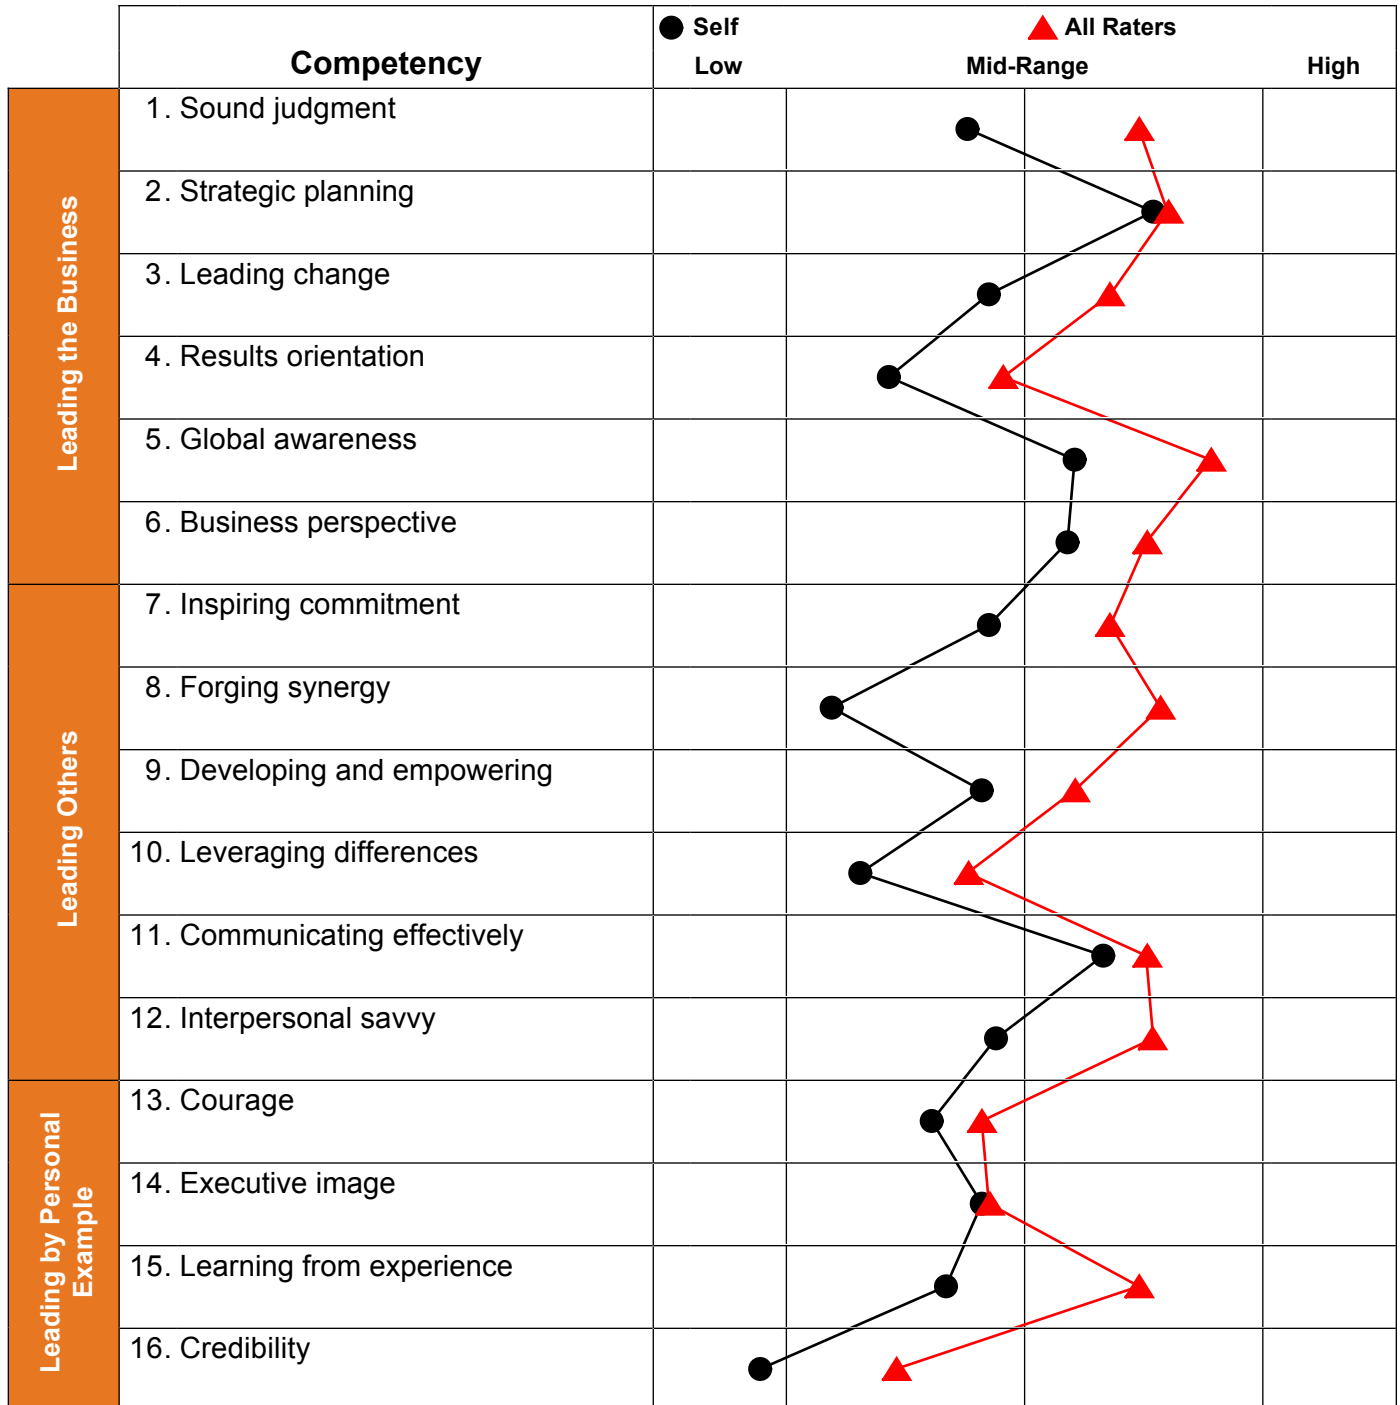

DK = Don't Know/Not Applicable

Section 1: Leadership Competencies - Overview Charts

Norm Group Comparisons: Self and All Raters

This chart displays your Self and All Rater scores relative to the scores of other people who have used Benchmarks for Executives. On this chart you can see if your scores are low, mid-range, or high compared to the normative database CCL maintains for Benchmarks for Executives.

Section 1: Leadership Competencies - Overview Charts

Norm Group Comparisons: By Rater Group

This chart provides more detailed information by breaking the All Rater scores into the component rater groups: Boss, Board Members, Peers and Direct Reports. Self scores are also plotted on this chart.

Section 2: Leadership Competencies - Comprehensive Data

The comprehensive data section shows each of the competencies in more detail and includes:

Competency Name and Description

The name and description appear at the top of the page.

Competency Summary with Breakout by Rater Group

The Importance column shows how many respondents chose the competency as one of the five Most Important for Success in your organization.

The Scores column shows your actual, or raw, competency score. You and your raters used the following response scale to indicate your level of effectiveness:

- 1 = Deficient
- 2 = Marginally effective
- 3 = Effective
- 4 = Highly Effective
- 5 = Exceptional
- DK = Don't Know/Not Applicable

Your norm group comparisons by rater group are reprinted in this chart. Your scores by rater group are plotted relative to scores of individuals in your norm or reference group.

In order to receive a competency-level score in any rater group:

- Each rater must complete at least 50% of the items in the competency, and
- A minimum number of raters in the group must submit a survey:

Boss - at least 1	Direct Reports - at least 2
Board Members - at least 1	Others - at least 1
Peers - at least 2	All Raters - at least 4

Item-level Feedback

This part of your feedback report shows the greatest level of detail and indicates how your raters responded to the individual items (questions) in the survey. The questions were listed in random order in the survey and are organized by competency in this report.

In order to receive an item-level score, the following number of raters must respond:

- Boss - at least 1
- Board Members - at least 1
- Peers - at least 3, to ensure anonymity
- Direct Reports - at least 3, to ensure anonymity
- Others - at least 1
- All Raters - at least 4, to ensure anonymity

Peers and Direct Reports are protected rater groups. If your report contains feedback from exactly two Peers and two Direct Reports, a combined score will be reported and labeled "Peers/Direct Reports".

Highest and Lowest Rated Items

The 5 highest rated items (including tied scores) for each rater group are bracketed and shaded in green. The 5 lowest rated items (including tied scores) are underlined and shaded in red.

Section 2: Leadership Competencies - Comprehensive Data

Rater Disagreement

An asterisk (*) by an item indicates a gap of three points or more in your ratings from at least two individuals in that rater group on that item.

Guide for Interpretation

- How do your responses compare to those of your raters?
- How do the scores from the various rater groups compare to each other?
- Are there areas where you consistently rate yourself lower or higher than others rate you?
- How do your scores compare to those of the norm group?
